Patchett Frame House
McCoole

1900

The Patchett House was built in the late 19th century. The residence consists of a two and a half story six bay wide square shaped main facade which was originally covered with weatherboard. The roof of the house is hipped, includes a soffit and frieze and is covered with slate shingles. Three cross-gable dormers are located on the front and two sides of the facade roof sash with a gothic sash frame window on each except for the front dormer which has a Palladian window. A wrap around porch with hipped supported by circular columns covers the main entrance and a wide flight of banistered stairs lead to the porch.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Patchett frame house is located at 650 Main Street, McCoolle, Allegany County on the east side of the road, near the intersection of Queen Street.

The residence consists of a two and one half story, six bay wide square shaped main facade. A first story wing abuts the main block on the west side; supported by cement block columns, the ground level serves as a carport. A second story wing abuts the main block on the rear northeastern side, and is supported by circular columns while the first story serves as a porch for the rear entrance. The building is a frame structure which originally was covered with weatherboarding, however recently it has been covered with asbestos shingles, but still retains a wooden belt course. The main facade is supported by a high stone foundation with plain water table and a bulkhead entrance leads to the basement. The roof of the house is hipped including a soffit and frieze and is covered by slate shingles. Three cross-gable dormers are located on the front and two sides of the facade roof and feature a gothic sash frame window on each, and two square lights on the front dormer. Windows in the remainder of the residence exhibit double hung wooden sash frames with one-over-one lights and plain trim. The main entrance is located on the front southwestern face and exhibits the original wide verticle light door with original hardware and plain trim. A wrap around porch with hipped roof supported by circular columns covers the main entrance and a wide flight of banistered stairs lead to the porch. Two corbeled brick chimneys, which are original are located within the facade; one is located to the interior of the facade while the other is located on the outside western end of the main facade.

The Patchett house is structurally very sound and retains much of its original appearance except for the replaced siding.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The frame house was built during the late nineteenth century for and by Mr. Patchett who was a prominent citizen of McCooles and banker in the nearby city of Keyser, West Virginia. The house is an excellent example of the fashionable Colonial Revival style of architecture found throughout the less rural sections of Allegany County. The house is a very large two and one half story block which has been very fashionably appointed.

The house is in excellent condition and certainly enhances the architectural heritage of the McCooles area as well as Allegany County.
